large scale cooperation will most likely create a new wish to bolster Nasser's position at home, and to save him from any political disaster into which his aggressive ambitions might precipitate him. Israel would be most happy to know Egypt had its face set towards economic and social most happy to know Egypt had its face set to wards economic and social progress, and under a Government that did not need its own brand of Hitlerism in order to remain in power, but it has little hope that American financial circles will necessarily consider this point of view. Meanwhile, fedayeen have resumed operations over the international frontier at Gaza, before the ink is dry on the new franchise written for them in the Hammarskjold Report. The only rositive progress of the past three months has been in the growing realization that the status quo of October was dangerous, and must not be restored, but this realization in the West does not necessarily mean that Nasser has come to the same conclusion.

For while there seems to be appreciation of Israel's need for free passage through the Gulf of Eilat and willingness to prevent, if possible, the re-establishment of Egyptian of femsive positions on the Gulf shore, any change in the position of the Gaza which is weedealty Germany which is whether and especialty of germany which is whether and especialty Germany of the gulf shore, any change in the position of the Gaza which is weedealty Germany which is whether and especialty Germany of the must be said and the Bar association.

At that time, those allies the restored to the Gulf shore, any change in the position of the Gaza which is weedealty Germany which is whether and especialty of germany of the must be and continued to the continued to the same conclusion of the Gaza which is weedealty of Einstein to the same conclusion of the Gaza where the continued to the same conclusion of the Gaza which is weedealty of Einstein the status quo of October was dangerous, and must not be restored, but this realization in the West does not necessarily mean that Nasser has come to the same conclusion.

For while there seems to be appreciation of Israel's need for free passage through the Gulf of Einstein the status quo of October was the problem to the same conclusion of the Gaza three the problem to the same conclusion

For while there seems to be appreciation of Israel's need for free passage through the Gulf of Eilat, and willingness to prevent, if possible, the re-establishment of Egyptian offensive positions on the Gulf shore, any change in the position of the Gaza Strip is felt to be legally much more difficult, even the position of the Gaza Strip is felt to be legally much more difficult, even in quarters where it is agreed that the renewal of fedayeen attacks should be prevented for the sake of stability. It is difficult for Israel to accept these legal hesitations. While Sharm e-Sh-ikh is situat-ed in the Sinai Desert that ed in the Sinai Desert that was handed over to Egypt before the days of even the Palestine Mandate, the Ga-za Strip has never been as Strip has never been legal v part of Egypt, and rights acquired there by the Egyptian Government were merel by force of occupation in 1948, in the course of an attack against Israel following the U.N. Resolution for Israel's establishment. Why should this occupation today be considered as offering an indicated as offering and indicated as offer Resolution for Israel's establishment. Why should this occupation today be considered as offering-an insuperable legal difficulty to establishment of an Israel regime in that area, again following occupation? The case might be different today ad Egypt ever attempted to incorporate the Strip in its own territory, or even to plan for its economic future, as Israel is already doing today. If she did not do so, it was not only in order to avoid responsibility for the refugees concentrated there, but also in implicit recognition of the fact that the Strip, separated from Egypt by all the breadth of the Sinai, would constitute a hopeless burden, and was completely indefensible from the military point of view. The Egyptians may have shown aglimmering of good sense in this matter, and the U.N. might do worse than follow their lead.

The first border crossing by fedsyeen certainly indicates that the Israel control of the Strip must be tightened up, and not relaxed. For the Egyptian High Command no doubt feels safe from Israel punitive action with U.N. soldiers to protect them. All military opinion is agreed that U.N.E.F. posts will not be able to keep single marauders out. It is the more important that there should be adequate Israel forces on the inside to keep the pupulation safe.

grumning M, of course, the government and every other public authority. Here grumbling perilously approaches the point where the public draws a line between "us" and "them," "ws" meaning the public and "they" the officials safely ensconced behind their barrier.

Government Target

The government departments which come into close contact with the public provide favourite targets for grumblers. There is the telephone service, the licensing and allocation departments and last but not least, the tax assessor. Among Histadrut members a most popular source of complaints is Kupat Hollin.

A special chapter is written by the labour exchanges, which in outlying places resemble closed fortresses in which the officials try to boild out against the unemployed. The list of high places which provide material for grumbling is practically unlimited. And when vocilerous complaints in the Press result in some place there is always another to fill the gap and provide new fuel for public indignation.

Special cause for grumbling is provided by protektris ("puil"). It would be a rewarding task for an enterprising sociologist to draw up a list of all the things you need protektris for. The Opposition maintains that you cannot even get a job without it. Others will at tempt to prove that you need it far licenses, for allocations, for credits, for tend of the real position. while, in general, his colour is hot.

Particularly worth noting it the artist's impression of "Bafad," atmospheric and with its huse, green and whites, affording a spot of cool colour in the midst of the other paintings; the "Pighting Cocks" where colour and design combine to convey movement and a wind-swept worsion of "Shithunat Hillel" in Ramat Gan, a well designed piece of work.

"Boats in Acre" is in a different manner, much calmer, the figures in the foreground well drawn and the rich colour attractive, while in Don Quincier Ellenbogen has striven, and to some extent succeeded, in conveying an air of mystery and remoteness.
